2. In their shadow, by their feet
Children play and true loves meet
Sons and daughters, friends and foes
Watched by eyes that never close
Between them grass and flowers grow
For what they they wait no one can know
Dawn and twilight, night and day
They wait the turning years away

3. Some say upon Midsummer's night
They walk when moon and stars are bright
Come the dawn no trace you'll find
But the footprints left behind
The time will come they'll wake again
To walk once more on hill and fen
Till then they stand so proud and still
Those silent giants on the hill
